Changes approved to save Bay $30,000, mayor questions out-of-city sewer extensions

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK

The Bay St. Louis City Council approved recommendations Tuesday for improvements in sewage and water projects which are expected to produce considerable savings in the future expansion of services near the new hospital site.

Mayor Victor Frankiewicz requested the council agree for improvements which include spending only a couple thousand dollars and will save the city $30,000 when the actual extension construction is underway.

The city's long-term savings will be realized when the eventual extension of the sewage and water services in the Scianna, Benigno and Paradise Lane area is being done, he said.

"These changes will save not only city dollars but the hospital will realize a savings of $10,000-$20,000," Frankiewicz said.

"They will also enable us to provide better fire protection and improve the water service to the city limits," he added.

The actual changes include installing fittings for extensions, fire hydrants and changing the location of a lift station and water line.

Also at the meeting Frankiewicz reported the discovery of sewage lines being constructed outside the city limits.

"In an effort to be open and honest with the council and the public, I want to report the construction of sewer lines outside the city limits near Joe's Bayou and in the City of Waveland," he said.

Frankiewicz said the lines were already installed before the discovery that they were beyond the corporate limits.

"These extensions outside the city limits are not shown on the preliminary plans nor on the overall project plan," he said.

Where the extensions do appear are on detailed drawings of the project areas that does not show the city limits.

"I do not believe the council knew of the extensions when the plans were approved," Frankiewicz said.

"In most all cases the engineer is relied on to do the actual measuring of the project area and stay within the boundaries," he said.

"The tragedy of it is that for the same amount of dollars, services could have been provided for the same number of customers living inside the city limits," Frankiewicz said.

The estimated cost of the two extension beyond the city limits is $9,000, less that one percent of the $1.3 million project.

Ward 2 Councilman James Thrifley said that it was the intent of the previous council to service the residents of Bay St. Louis and that he personally had no knowledge of the extensions outside the city limits.

Frankiewicz said the drawings had been inspected to insure that there were no other extensions beyond the corporate limits.

At this time the city must make the best of the situation and try to recoup the construction cost from the people the lines will serve, Frankiewicz said.

In the Joe's Bayou area the extension will service only about four households.

Frankiewicz said it will take 10-20 years to recoup the construction cost of the extension area.

The extension into the Waveland City Limits on Eighth Street has the possibility of servicing several customers if a proposed trailer park is installed, he added.

Frankiewicz speculated on the possible ways the extensions were included in the plans but said there was nothing conclusive at this time.

"This is another example of how extensive investigation and planning can prevent problems and will eventually pay for itself in the future," he said.

County repaid for copying overcharge

By DENA BISNETTE

About $11,000 in land roll copying fees collected due to a seven-year-old error has been returned to the county general fund.

Chancery Clerk Michael Necaise said Wednesday the $11,000 had been collected through his office over about seven years.

Necaise said the fee calculations used to make the collections were incorrect because there was an error in the equation used to figure homestead exemption fees.

He had been using the same equation used by previous administrations without knowing that it was not correct.

He said the error was discovered in a recent audit by state auditors, but was apparently not found in an earlier audit.

"If it's not mine, I don't want the money to begin with. I just wish this had been called to my attention six or seven years ago," Necaise commented.

Jerry Nash, an assistant to State Auditor Ray Mahus, said, "It was an unintentional mistake on his part."

He said Necaise was apparently charging twice the usual amount for copying the rolls, a service the clerk's office performs for the county.

Necaise said he had corrected the problem by transferring $11,000 from his office account to the county general fund.

He added that the equation which resulted in the collections has also been corrected.

"We charged him back to 1981 because audits were three years behind when Mahus took office in 1984," Nash explained.

ID and cause of death still sought on woman

By ELLIS CUEVAS

Law enforcement officers are still seeking the identification of the skeletal remains of a woman found on an isolated road near Pearlinton by hunters on Nov. 27.

"We have visited the area again where the skeletal remains were found and some clothing we have located could possibly have been worn by the victim," said Hancock County Sheriff Ronald Peterson late Wednesday.

"The woman was clad in a flowery-type blouse and unclad from the waist down with the exception of a pair of boots. In further combing of the area, we have found a pair of blue jeans she could have possibly been wearing," Peterson added.

Hancock County Coroner Harold Stiglet had the remains taken to the Mississippi Crime Laboratory to be examined by State Medical Examiner Thomas Bennett.

Bennett compiled a description of the woman and it has been entered with the National Crime Information Center.

Peterson said the cause of death is as of yet undetermined by Bennett.

"We have received a lot of calls from throughout the United States on missing women since last week. It is highly possible the woman may have entered the county from Louisiana, as the road where here remains were found, is the first isolated one in the state," the sheriff continued.

"Along those lines we are working very closely with the St. Tammany Sheriff's Department, which held a news conference yesterday issuing a description of the woman," Peterson stated.

The body is apparently that of a 25-year-old white woman about five feet, five inches tall and weighing 105 to 110 pounds.

Hancock County's Sheriff's Investigator Delbert Seay and Mississippi Highway Patrol Investigator T.P. Naylor are in charge of the investigation, still underway.

Reagan to recommend Gex as federal judge

By DENA BISNETTE

Hancock County attorney Walter Gex III has received verbal confirmation from President Ronald Reagan that he will be recommended for a federal judge's post.

Gex said he talked to Reagan by telephone Tuesday.

He said his appointment for the post, the Mississippi Southern District, must still be approved by the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee.

Gex said he does not know whether the subcommittee will consider the matter before or after Congress recesses for its Christmas break.

After the subcommittee approves the appointment of a federal judge, the matter is turned over for consideration by the full Senate.

Gex was recommended for nomination for the federal judge's post by Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., and Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., and Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La.

Landowners group seeks support for proposed legislation changes

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK

The Mississippi Landowners Association is sponsoring a rally Friday, Dec. 6 at 6 p.m. at the Carriere Football Stadium to gain support for proposed mineral rights taxation legislation.

Other proposed legislation supported by the landowners group includes royalties to surface owners, compensation of landowners for drilling on their property, drilling safety provisions for landowners and pollution and safety laws to protect the landowners. Organized in 1982 by J. H. Strahan and Dave McIntosh, the landowners associations is seeking to restore rights to landowners of property.

"Mineral rights owners can take over your property to get the minerals out."

Strahan, who lives in Pearl River County, said that 90 percent of the mineral rights of the 530,000 acres in the county is owned by someone other than the surface landowner.

"And 80 percent of the severed mineral rights are owned by corporations out of the state," he added.

Strahan said it was a common practice for big companies after cutting the timber on large tracts of land to sell the land while retaining the mineral rights.

"This was done all across the state, not just in Pearl River County," he said.

Many property owners do not realize what they are facing should the owner of the mineral rights decide to drill on the property, he said.

"Mineral right owners can almost take over your property as they do whatever is necessary to get the minerals out of your property," Strahan said.

The problems of one family in Poplarville has brought a great amount of attention to the lack of rights of the surface owners, he added.

This family now has a drilling well 400 feet from their front door, Strahan said.

"In addition to several acres of their property actually fenced off for the well site, they have experienced a 60 percent devaluation of their property due to the well in the front yard," he said.

"The landowners association is trying to get laws changed to help the surface owners, who pay all the taxes," Strahan said.

"Our taxes are expected to increase 23 percent in 1986 but mineral deeds are not taxed," he said.

"While our tax dollars pay for school and other services and our

"If you don't care how much more you are taxed you don't need to be there."

—Strahan

property can be sold for taxes, mineral deeds are tax-free other than an eight cent stamp," Strahan added.

"If you are concerned about higher taxes that are being put on the general public, be at this meeting," he said, "If you don't care how much more you are taxed you don't need to be there."

Additional information on mineral rights vs. surface rights will be available at the meeting.

All landowners, taxpayers and citizens of Mississippi are urged to attend the rally.

Aldermen approve redistricting plan

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Waveland Board of Aldermen has approved a redistricting plan designed to equalize the proportion of voters in the city's four wards.

The aldermen accepted the plan Tuesday on the recommendation of a citizen committee appointed to oversee the redistricting.

The committee, at a public hearing prior to the board meeting, received no objections or comments on the plan after checking statistics compiled for the U.S. Department of Justice, which must approve any redistricting proposal.

Statistics, maps, newspaper announcements and other information pertaining to the redistricting will be forwarded to the Justice Department after a final check by Board Attorney Lucien Gex.

In other business, the aldermen: —Authorized Gex to look into the purchase of professional liability insurance for policemen and public officials;

—Authorized the repair of street lights on Old Spanish Trail;

—Approved Mayor John Longo's proposal to appoint Linda Penrose and Buddy Klein to a search committee for a new superintendent for the Bay St. Louis Municipal Separate School District; and —Authorized Engineer Ray Eaton to oversee a street improvement project expected to begin next week.

County still trying to get hurricane aid

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Hancock County Board of Supervisors is still trying to obtain federal assistance for completion of hurricane clean-up efforts.

According to Beat One Supervisor Bert Courge, whose beat contains most of Beach Road and the unfinished clean-up, there are no more local funds for the project.

About $10,000 in debris clearing remains unfinished, Courge added. Much of the debris is rotting marshgrass left on the shoreline by Hurricane Juan.

The supervisor told the rest of the board Monday that he has received numerous complaints about the odor caused by the decaying debris.

Board President A.A. Kellar said that $25,000 in interest on the county's general fund account had been allocated for clean-up, but about $30,000 was actually spent before clean-up was stopped.

The $30,000 consisted mostly of funds paid to contracted haulers and did not include road and bridge funds paid to county employees who participated in clean-up efforts.

"We need to try to contact Trent Lott, Thad Cochran and the other members of the Mississippi delegation and expedite this," Courge said.

The board decided to contact the delegation by mail first.

The board also plans to discuss sending Courge and possibly other board representatives to Washington, D.C., to talk with Lott and the others personally, Kellar said.

"If we don't get any results this time, we may have to go up there," he explained.

Governor William Allain has signed a request that the state be declared a disaster area following Hurricane Juan and has forwarded it to President Ronald Reagan, who must sign it before federal emergency funding can be made available.

Courge said he is concerned because the disaster declaration request covers the entire state.

"I know that was done to cover any tornados that may have accompanied the hurricane, but Hancock County took almost all of the damage," he said.

"Is having the whole state on the declaration going to damage our chances of getting help?"

Another major problem left by Hurricane Juan is damage to Beach Road.

County Engineer Larry Seal said inspectors from the Federal Highway Administration and Federal Emergency Management Agency had inspected the road and are compiling statistics on the extent of the damages and repair costs.

He said he had received no word on whether either agency has completed the figures or whether they can help fund repair.

Seal also contended that the existing road is so extensively damaged that reconstruction would be more appropriate than repair, but reconstruction would also be more expensive.

In other business, the board: —Agreed to provide an additional telephone extension in the Justice Court office at the request of Justice Court Judge Joseph Dobson;

—Approved advertisements for bids for various supplies for 1986;

—Set a meeting with Federal Emergency Management officials for Dec. 10 for discussion of flood control in the county; and —Opened bids for repair of Hurricane Elena damage at the courthouse and for lease-purchase of a hydraulic excavator for the county landfill and took both under advisement.

The next meeting will be Dec. 13 at 9 a.m.

Those favoring combined Hancock school system need to step forward

Educational excellence appears to be a major concern for the majority of citizens in Hancock County.

In addition, more and more residents appear to be in favor of a combined school system in Hancock County.

The time is now for those in favor of a combined school system in Hancock County to step forward. Millions of dollars worth of construction in both school systems is now in the planning stages.

It would be wise for Hancock Countians to have a thorough study of the feasibility of a combined school system before any additional construction.

The recent announcement from the State Legislature on the study of only one type of school system throughout the state may also lead to a mandate of only one school system in a county the size of Hancock.

The combination of both systems would be a big task. Yet, it is felt we have the people among us who are capable of doing the task without some outsiders coming in and telling us how to do it.

Quotables by Cuevas

We seem to be always harping about litter, but it is a continuous problem in Hancock County.

Fishing has been good in recent weeks on the US-90 bridge and it also causes a problem with litter.

We have mentioned numerous times how fishermen catch catfish and leave them on the bridge which is dangerous to motorists as well as walkers.

Another problem appears at the foot of the bridge at Beach Boulevard where the fishermen park their vehicles.

They bring their lunch along and eat it and leave the wrappers creating a serious eyesore for visitors to our county.

It appears these people could save their trash until they reach home and properly dispose of it.

It is now time for everyone to consider the appearance of our communities.

We realize the hurricanes have added to the amount of litter on our waterfronts and elected officials are trying to remove it as soon as possible.

Let us all pull together for a more beautiful county.

This was one of those years when we went from warm to cold passing over cool weather.

On Sunday everyone was in wearing short sleeves and Monday the dress changed to sweater and jacket combinations.

Some folks like cold weather, but we are not among them.

The Holiday Season is upon us once again and many parties are being planned.

We are hoping that those who celebrate a little too much while partying will remember to have someone else drive them home.

Too many families suffer during the holidays because of persons driving while drinking.

Santa Claus received a big welcome as he arrived at the Hancock County Courthouse Sunday evening.

Hundreds of boys and girls were ready for the jolly old man from the North Pole to tell him of their wishes for Christmas morning.

The annual event sponsored by the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce is always a big day for youngsters.

We hope everyone's Christmas wishes will come true.

Christmas may be a time in which some folks have some extra time because of vacations and holidays.

We would like to remind everyone that it may also be a good time to visit one of the county libraries and select a book or two and do a little reading.

There are some very good book selections available at our libraries and students may want to select subjects which can be of help to them in school.

And best of all, the staffs of our libraries are so helpful.

Bill Minor

By BILL MINOR
It's strange to hear legislators who never gave two hoots about allowing the governor of Mississippi to succeed himself now confidently predict that a gubernatorial succession constitutional amendment will pass at the 1986 session.

Obviously something is happening out at the forks of the creek to persuade a number of lawmakers to finally vote to bring a succession amendment out of the Legislature and give the people a chance to vote on it.

Since the 1890 constitution was written, governors of Mississippi have been prohibited from immediately seeking election to the office after one four-year term. And in the 95 years since, the people have not been permitted to vote on an amendment to lift the one-term limitation.

In modern state history, Gov. Bill Waller in his term 1972 to 1976 was the first to lobby the Legislature to submit succession to the people. Although he asked that it apply to the next governor after him, Waller found a deaf ear on Capitol Hill.

Then Cliff Finch picked up on the succession issue in his 1978-80 term, staging mass meetings of his supporters to bring pressure on lawmakers to submit the issue. Bumper stickers saying "Succession Now" appeared on automobiles for Finch backers.

Finch managed to get the amendment through the Senate, but not before it excluded him from succession. Even then, the amendment was shot down in the House Constitution Committee.

Gov. William Winter, whom many felt would have had the best chance of getting the amendment through the Legislature of any governor in the past two decades, declined to push the issue during his 1980-84 term.

Although he had made no real issue of succession in his winning campaign in 1983, Gov. Bill Allain has since made it a top administration goal. He had even predicted it would pass at the 1986 session and be in place before the 1987 gubernatorial election.

The irony of the situation is that Allain, who is considered to have a little rapport with the Legislature because of his successful fight in removing lawmakers from state executive boards, may turn out to be the governor who will break the succession barrier.

No doubt a lot of lawmakers who have changed their minds about letting the people vote on succession are responding to mounting public opinion that the one-term governor may be at the heart of Mississippi's lack of economic progress.

They are apparently tired of being pinpointed as the culprits in blocking gubernatorial succession.

What may well be the key question of the 1986 session is: Will the succession amendment include the sitting governor, Bill Allain, or be made effective with the next governor?

There are several theories now going around as to how that question may be resolved, and the strategies involved.

One is that lawmakers don't want to do anything that would allow Allain to be governor four more years, so they very promptly will exclude him from the amendment and make succession apply to the next governor.

Allain, in fact, had begun the drive for the succession amendment insisting he neither cared about being governor beyond his four-year term nor did he expect the amendment to include him.

From some unexpected sources in the Legislature, however, the idea is gaining momentum that the succession amendment should include the sitting governor. The immediate speculation is that inclusion of Allain would make it much harder to get the two-thirds vote necessary through both branches of the Legislature.

But there is a much deeper motive seen in the maneuver to put before the people an amendment that would allow Allain to seek re-election.

Secretly, some legislative observers believe, longtime foes of gubernatorial succession see the latter course as the best hope of having it defeated at the polls. Their hope is to foreclose the issue before a new constitution is written.

Kentucky, one of the three states other than Mississippi which does not have gubernatorial succession, had put an amendment before its voters several years ago which would have allowed then Gov. John Y. Brown to run for re-election. This created such negative political reaction that the amendment was turned down by the Kentucky voters.

Some old heads in the Legislature seem to be of the opinion that Allain is unpopular with the people because of the residual doubts about him from the homosexual allegations raised in the 1983 general election campaign.

Certainly if succession is put before Mississippi voters in November, 1986, with Allain included, the battle would turn into a referendum on Allain's governorship, and would force him to make an all-out campaign, whether he chose to seek re-election or not.

That strategy could well backfire on his old foes in the Legislature, if they miscalculate on Allain's popularity.

School boards 'shrewd and clever' in 16th Section land lease dealings

Editor
The Sea Coast Echo
Bay St. Louis

Dear Sir,
Over the years of 16th Section Land management, people gained faith in their government.

They went out and, by the sweat of their brow, they built homes, farms and businesses on the property.

There was no guarantee of exactly what their next lease would cost them, yet because of timber and mineral rights reserved by school boards, and the people's reluctance to move on and build on rental land, the past revealed rental costs, set by elected officials, to be no more and often less than what a person would pay on private property.

Then because it was part of our government, people acquired a sense of security and faith.

Never did they realize that our country would lose its feeling of compassion for others, or the desire for fairness and justice for all, or that God would no longer be thought of as the Head of this nation, and that prayer would be banned.

Now we have a worldly government whose views are much different.

The State Supreme Court just ruled in the case of Turney vs. Marion County Board of Education, and in their decision, the court described the school board as a prudent manager for charging more rental than what a person would pay on similar land in the private sector.

I checked Webster's definition of prudent and found it described as shrewd or clever in the management of practical affairs.

Then I could only wonder, what's so clever about a strong and uncontrolled government body that places a person's life work in peril and confiscates and destroys a people's faith.

Whatever happened to, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you?"

May you be with God
Steven D. Turney

IN CONGRESS

By Cong. Trent Lott

TOO MUCH SPENDING
The dilemma in bringing the federal budget under control revolves around two issues: taxes and spending.

The average Mississippian tells me outright that he is opposed to increasing taxes as a means of bringing down the deficit. Raising taxes to reduce the deficit is no consolation to the middle class working person who is usually the most severely impacted.

That brings us to cutting spending. Everyone is for it until their favorite federal program is targeted for a slowdown in growth or a freeze in spending. Cutting spending for many is okay as long as it doesn't affect any program that benefits them.

Therein lies the problem. The continued existence of almost all federal programs depends on a strong and vocal core constituency. And, as we know, Congress is reluctant to take on those core constituencies when the time comes to make the hard budget decisions.

A lot has been written on President Reagan's record in dealing with taxes and spending, but less has been written about the Congress' role.

The Reagan Economic Recovery Program keyed on a three-year reduction in individual tax rates beginning in 1981 and in the reduction of most spending. Congress okayed the tax rates but has been less than honest with the taxpayers in its chameleon-like methods of dealing with spending.

So, what is the result? University of Maryland economist Melville J. Ulmer reports that from 1980 to 1984, federal revenue rose by 29 percent, despite the President's oft-criticized tax cuts. Conservative columnist Emmett Tyrrell Jr. notes that this is more than the growth in the population and the price level combined.

During this same period, economist Ulmer says government spending outlays grew even faster, by 44 percent. And, despite what the pundits claim, defense is not responsible for this growth. Non-defense spending amounted to three-fourths of the total budget, rising by 37 percent from 1980 to 1984.

Tyrrell calculates that with this expansion in government spending, it would have taken a 50 percent increase in both individual and corporate income taxes to balance the budget.

This economic report, like no other I have seen, unmistakably lays the inability to reduce spending on Congress' front porch. It is the Congress that authorizes spending programs, and it is the Congress that controls the purse strings for spending that money.

The solution to the federal deficit is not to raise taxes. Congress should cut spending!

THE PEOPLE'S BUSINESS

Mississippi Economic Council

It was Ralph Waldo Emerson who said, "The best government is the least government."

The time may have come when Mississippians need to remind legislators—especially members of the State Senate—of that truism.

Following Emerson's counsel, Mississippi's Legislature has been a body of part-time government servants. Members of the Legislature have come from the farms and fields, from the factories and stores, and from the offices to manage affairs of government, then they have returned home.

A dozen years ago the Legislature decided it needed to meet more often than the then practice of meeting every other year. So they adopted annual legislative sessions.

In recent years more and more legislative committees have been meeting throughout the year, with some legislators spending more time at the capitol than in other occupations.

Now comes the announcement that the Senate will be providing offices near the capitol for every member of that body. Every member of the chamber will have his own private office.

First legislative sessions every year. Then, more and more meetings in the months when the Legislature is not in session. Now, private offices for every member of the Senate.

Next, a full-time Legislature. Whatever happened to Ralph Waldo Emerson?

Nursing student runs for health

A 25-year-old nursing student at the University of Southern Mississippi-Gulf Park campus says running and her pursuit of a nursing career are closely related.

"Displaying the 'image' of health is the best way for you to show others the benefits of being healthy," says Sally Law, a full-time nursing student at Gulf Park.

Law says she feels her involvement in running is an ideal way to show others how they can stay healthy.

A native of Greece, Law began running "track trips" (3-10 mile races) as a young girl and has been running in races ever since. Growing up in Belgium, she ran races in Germany, England and France.

Law has run in many of the "fun runs" on the Gulf Coast and also participates in road races at nearby

Mobile, Ala.; and at Nashville, Tenn. and Tuscaloosa, Ala. One of her most recent runs was the Sara Land Festival Run in Mobile.

Puma athletic wear furnishes Law with running gear, which she wore in the Summer Breeze Road Race in Alabama and the Third National 10K Run in Tennessee.

"I'm a strong believer in illness prevention and health care; that's one reason I chose nursing as my profession."

"As a runner, my body is in top condition, which is a visual cue to my patients that I am concerned about my health," she said. "If they realize I'm concerned about my own health, then it puts them at ease with me as their nurse."

Law is scheduled to graduate from USM-Gulf Park in 1987.

RUNNER FOR HEALTH—Sally Law, a nursing student at the University of Southern Mississippi-Gulf Park campus, says keeping in shape through running allows her to present to others an "image" of health. Law, who participates in road races all over the Southeast, said she feels setting a good example is important for those in the nursing profession. A native of Greece, she has run in races since her youth.

Old Capitol plans Christmas specials

When the giant cedar tree is finally decorated in the Old Capitol rotunda, Mississippians know that the Christmas season is really here.

On December 8, visitors to the State Historical Museum, Old Capitol, in Jackson, can see traditional Christmas decorations, including handmade ornaments for the giant tree and for three other period trees—Antebellum, Victorian, and Depression.

Antique toys and dolls from appropriate eras surround the trees. A new model train—the Panama Limited—will be running through the miniature town of Possum Ridge; and two Christmas films will be offered. Puppet shows, puppetry workshops, and concerts are scheduled during the month.

The special Christmas exhibit this year is "Godey's Ladies in Miniature," a collection of over thirty porcelain dolls dressed in the fine nineteenth century fashions of the then-popular magazine, "Godey's Lady's Book". The dolls are loaned by Mrs. Edna Whitfield Alexander, daughter of Sallie Atkinson Whitfield, maker of the dolls.

Peter Zapletel's Puppet Arts Theatre will present "Classical Miniatures" on Saturdays December 7 and 14—fast-moving colorful vignettes set to the music of classical composers. In addition, the Mississippi Puppetry Guild will offer puppet workshops on Sundays, December 8 and 15, and Saturday, December 21.

Sunday concerts include performances by the Mustard Seed Choir (December 8), St. Andrew's Cathedral Choir (December 15), and the Puppet Arts Theatre (December 22).

A Christmas film for children will be shown weekdays at 9, 11 and 3, and Saturday mornings at 9 and 11. The model electric trains run daily.

Visitors are invited to come by the Old Capitol Sales Shop, which features Mississippi-made crafts and Mississippi books for Christmas gift-giving. A needlepoint kit featuring the design from the historic House of Representatives Chamber carpet is one new item in the Sales Shop this year.

The public is cordially invited to attend all "Christmas at the Old Capitol" (December 8-22) events free of charge. For more information, call the Old Capitol at 601-354-6222.

Underground tanks must be reported

New regulations concerning underground storage tanks are being put into effect by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

The new federal law requires all tank owners to complete a notification for all tanks in use, and for all tanks abandoned after Jan. 1, 1974.

Copies of the notification form will be mailed to all known tank owners in mid-January 1986. Early copies will be available from the Mississippi Department of Natural Resources, Bureau of Pollution Control upon request after Nov. 15, 1985.

The completed form must be returned to the Department of Natural Resources by May 8, 1986.

The federal law authorizes a maximum penalty of $10,000 per tank per day for failure to notify.

The EPA estimates that there are from three to five million storage tanks in the United States that contain hazardous substances or petroleum products. A leak in any underground storage tank poses a potential threat to the groundwater in the area.

Questions concerning the notification requirement and request for copies of the form should be addressed to Sam Mabry, Underground Storage Tank Section, Bureau of Pollution Control, P.O. Box 10385, Jackson, MS 39209, telephone 961-5171.

Randolph asks for meeting on possible consolidation

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Hancock County School Board has been asked to consider a joint meeting with the Bay St. Louis Municipal Separate School District on the possibilities of consolidating the two districts.

The request was presented to the board Monday by Hancock County Superintendent of Education Terrell Randolph during a discussion concerning a special meeting on a proposed building program for the county.

Randolph said he feels the consolidation issue should be laid to rest before the county district makes any attempts to pass a bond issue for a proposed building program.

"Having that still up in the air could hurt our ability to pass a bond issue," he explained.

Although the Mississippi legislature has delayed the possibility of a state-mandated consolidation.

Included in the Educational Reform Act of 1982, consolidating the Bay and Hancock districts could have some advantages, Randolph said.

"There might be some educational benefits and we need to look into the matter before we continue further into the building program," he said.

Because Board President Billie Faye Lyons was absent, the board postponed action on a joint meeting until their next meeting, which will be 5 p.m. Dec. 10.

The board is also planning a second meeting on the proposed building program.

Alternatives presently being discussed include construction of a new high school and junior high complex near the county vocational-technical school and renovations and additions to existing schools.

Last month, the board decided that either alternative would make a bond issue necessary and agreed that voters should be allowed to choose between a new school or renovations and additions.

In other business, the board:

—Authorized Randolph to look into the possibility of implementing a workman's compensation system for the district;

—Approved several travel requests for administrators and staff members attending seminars;

—Approved resignations and employment recommendations;

—Open bids on lease-purchase of three classroom modules and took them under advisement; and —Approved a request for a 16th section lease.

Insurance industry seeks damage awards reduction

Punitive damage settlements cost Mississippi insurance premium payers millions of dollars last year and threaten to raise current premiums to higher and higher levels, according to Cliff Tucker, Mississippi Insurance Council chairman.

Punitive damages are sums of money in addition to the actual losses that are awarded to a plaintiff in order to punish a defendant for a negligent or wrongful act. Punitive damages have made some types of insurance coverage almost unavailable at any price.

Under current Mississippi law, punitive damages have no relation to the actual amount of damage suffered. For instance, in a recent Jackson County case, a plaintiff was awarded $8 million in punitive damages for a clerical error on a $20,000 insurance policy.

"Too often juries base their decisions on emotion rather than the facts. Sixteen states already have passed legislation to make punitive damages bear a reasonable relation to the compensatory damages," Tucker said.

"Many plaintiff attorneys take on punitive damages cases on a contingent fee basis; they agree to represent the plaintiff in return for a percent of the damage settlement. If they don't win the case, they aren't paid. A study by the Rand Corporation's Institute for Civil Justice showed that 63 percent of the money paid in asbestos cases so far has gone to attorneys' fees and court costs," he continued.

Legislation is being drafted to correct the problem of Mississippi's generous punitive damages laws. The legislation will be introduced into the 1986 session of the legislature. Jenkins says that the Mississippi Insurance Council is involved in a public awareness campaign to inform the public about the abuses of punitive damages and the reform legislation.

On childcare...

One problem recurring to many working parents is how to provide the kind of care you would give if you were at home. Proponents of childcare co-ops say that a co-op can provide Mom and Dad care because those are who own and manage the co-op. For parents interested in starting a childcare co-op, write to Marsha Krassner, National Co-op Bank, 1630 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Washington, DC 20009. You might also care to write Parent Cooperative Pre-school International, Box 15604, Phoenix, Arizona 85060.

For more information on selecting a childcare center, send a self-addressed business envelope and a request for "How to Choose", to the National Association for the Education of Young Children, 1834 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Washington, DC 20009.

On housing...

Many of the questions we get at the Cooperative Extension Service Consumer Management Center relate to spending guidelines. One of the biggest areas of concern is housing costs. Here are some rules of thumb on budgeting for housing expenses.

One rule of thumb in family budgeting suggests that a household allow one-fourth of the gross monthly income (or one week's income) for housing expenses.

Housing expenses are defined by some as mortgage principle and interest only. Others define it as principle, interest, taxes and home insurance. To be most realistic in terms of the total household budget, housing expense should include principle, interest, taxes, insurance and an allowance for maintenance.

Another guideline suggests that monthly housing costs for principle, interest, taxes, insurance and maintenance average one and one-half percent of the purchase price of the house.

Applying the one-fourth of gross monthly income guidelines, a $15,000 annual income yields about $300 per month to be allowed for housing expenses.

When applying the one and one-half percent guidelines, $300 per month may support a $20,000 house.

On utility bills

If your utility bills are higher than your neighbor's, here are some possible reasons why:

The refrigerator and freezer doors are opened frequently and left open while deciding what to get.

Laundry is allowed to continue tumbling in the dryer after it's dry.

Warm water rinses are used in the clothes washer instead of cold rinses, and hot wash water is used when warm water will work just as well.

The room air conditioner's thermostat setting is adjusted a few degrees cooler.

The oven door is opened frequently during baking and food is basted with the oven door wide open.

The oven rack's position is changed after preheating.

Both the clothes washer and the dishwasher are operated with incomplete loads.

A careless consumer with energy-wasting habits can actually negate the energy savings provided by a high efficiency appliance. Energy-saving measures, therefore, should begin at home - with each of us playing our part.

On reducing insurance costs
A program of regular exercise can help to reduce life insurance costs. More and more insurance companies are offering discounts to neatly individuals who undertake a regular program of physical fitness. Some require yearly exams in order to qualify, however, employers that institute fitness programs should check with insurance carriers for lower group rates.

On choosing insurance beneficiaries

When you buy life insurance the naming of a beneficiary is a decision that must be made. The choice will depend on your personal circumstances. Some of the options include: your estate, your spouse, your children, your business, co-owners, a creditor, or a trust.

The estate is chosen when the benefits are needed for "clean-up" for debts and burial costs or for administrative costs and taxes. If the estate consists mainly of non-cash assets which might have to be liquidated, the insurance benefit can be very helpful.

Most people prefer to have the bulk of their insurance payable directly to members of the family. Reasons most often given for this choice include:

—Tax advantage— Insurance payable to the estate will always be included in federal estate taxes. If the policy is given to someone else for ownership at least three years before death, it is kept out of federal tax plans.

—Immediate and direct payment— Insurance payable to named individuals is made immediately while in an estate, payment is made only when the estate has been settled and final distribution is made.

—Elimination of probate expenses— There are no filing costs or probate fees, no notices of sale, and no court costs, as with an estate receiving the insurance.

—Exemption from claims of creditors— Life insurance to named beneficiaries in every state in the union is given special exemption from claims of the creditors of the insured. Proceeds in most cases cannot even be reached by creditors to the beneficiary. Check in your area for this guideline in planning your insurance beneficiary.

On security systems for the home
Automatic timers are fine for regularly turning on and off solitary lights. But now add-on home electronic systems can operate dozens of lights and appliances or switch on security systems from a remote timer or a telephone.

Hear a sound in the night? Just push a button on your bedside control module and every house light in the system comes on. At the office? Use your telephone to activate the oven, air conditioner or outside lights before you get home.

General Electric's HomeMinder is typical of what an add-on system can do. A central control about the size of a shirt box contains the basic program and connects like a cable leading to a standard television. Appliances and lights are linked to the system by small plugs at the wall socket or with replacement switches for wall lights. Each is hand set with a combination letter-digit code. Your television set doubles as your programming guide.

Foiling would-be burglars can be accomplished by playing a stereo randomly through the day or switching on lights during the night that are placed on the system. On/off cycles can be varied up to 60 minutes. You can use the telephone to activate the system, making it possible to operate from outside your home any light or appliance that's plugged into HomeMinder.

But it is not cheap. The basic system sells for around $400 and comes with only a handful of the necessary plugs. Additional plugs sell for about $20 each.

If you want something less costly, there is a model a good deal less sophisticated. First Alert Automatic Light Control is a device that can dim and brighten lights at specified times. The $19.99 unit contains an automatic program similar to GE's and varies the on/off periods to give your house a more lived-in look.

Smart homes of the future will integrate your home computer, some health diagnostic devices, and household appliances. You'll be able to take your temperature, for example, when you turn off the alarm clock in the morning. The computer will tell you whether to call in sick, then automatically adjusts the house temperature if you're staying at home. Contractors predict they will be building the first nonexperimental smart homes later in this decade.

Addison named 1985 Executive of the Year

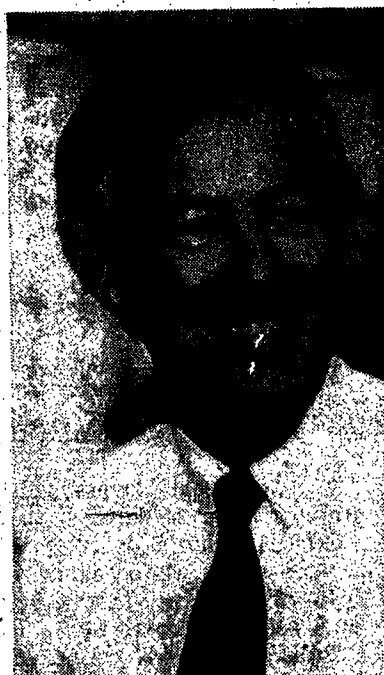

Southern Company President Edward L. Addison has been named 1985 Executive of the Year by the National Management Association. The award, given annually since 1925, is the NMA's highest honor and is presented to an executive who has made a major contribution to improving the management profession in America.

In a keynote address at the NMA's annual conference in Las Vegas, Nev., Addison said that in American society the spreading ethic of participation is changing the way corporations conduct their business affairs.

"As a result, today's managers must become more involved in the process that shapes public policy. If we don't, our voices will not be heard when the decisions are made—decisions that will profoundly affect our stockholders, our coworkers, and our customers."

"We must shoulder a responsibility that is far broader than the balance sheet," he continued. "We must resolve to keep alive the public climate in which free enterprise can flourish."

Addison is president and chief executive officer of The Southern Company—parent firm of one of the largest electric utility systems in the nation. The Southern Company's four operating units—Alabama Power, Georgia Power, Gulf Power, and Mississippi Power—supply electricity to more than 10-million Southerners.

Under Addison's direction, The Southern Company recently formed a new subsidiary—Southern Electric Investments. This company was established to participate financially and technically in the development of alternative energy sources ranging from photovoltaics to cogeneration.

Addison, 55, is an engineer by training. He received a bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering from the University of South Carolina in 1950. He joined the Southern electric system in 1954 as a junior engineer at Gulf Power.

Over the next two decades, he advanced through a number of engineering and management positions, and in 1975 he was named executive vice president of Gulf Power. Two years later, in 1977, he transferred to Birmingham and served as executive vice president of Southern Company Services—The Southern Company's engineering and special services subsidiary.

He returned to Gulf Power in 1978 as president and chief executive officer. Addison was named president and chief executive officer of The Southern Company in 1983.

"I'm still quite adrift in flour and pecans and chocolate and sugar and such, truly 'cooking up a storm' of this and that for family enjoyment and various parties and Yuletide gifts - and having a wonderful time. Aren't you?"

Here are a few specialties that will please the recipients, I'm sure. Here's:

BOURBON BALLS

1 cup powdered sugar
3 jiggers bourbon*
2 Tbsp. Karo syrup
2 cups ground pecans
2 Tbsp. cocoa
1 large pkg. vanilla wafers
Grind the wafers and pecans, and mix the dry ingredients. Pour in the bourbon and Karo, and mix with your hands. Form into small balls, and roll in powdered sugar.

*Brandy or rum may be substituted for the bourbon. These are best when made at least several days beforehand, so that flavors will "ripen." Place in tightly covered container - and for giving, pile into a brandy snifter or other container, tie with a red ribbon. And, if you're feeling truly generous, mix up some pecan treats, such as that old-time Creole favorite, sugared pecans or:

PACANNE GRALLE

(Grah-lay)
2 cups pecan halves
1 cup sugar
½ cup water, lightly salted
1 tsp. vanilla
Bring the sugar and water to a slow boil, and cook until you can gather sugar threads to form a soft ball when dropped into a cup of water.

Add the pecan halves and vanilla to the mixture, stirring rapidly until the pecans are coated with the sugar mixture. Pour out onto waxed paper, let cool and separate the pecan halves as they cool.

You may double or triple this recipe as you wish. These keep well, and make attractive gifts, in boxes or ribboned glass containers.

Another pecan tidbit is Spiced Pecans, for which you cook a cup of sugar, half a cup of evaporated milk and half a teaspoon of vanilla, and slowly stir in a cup of pecan halves.

along with cinnamon or such. Again, pour onto waxed paper, separate halves as they cool.

And, my favorite of favorites - Salted Pecans - just spread pecans on a cookie or other sheet, heat in preheated 300 degree oven, turning from time to time until light brown and toasted. Splash some melted, salted butter over, along with dashes of Tabasco, and stir well. Place in tightly covered container - and hide them away from everyone, including yourself, until ready to package for gifts, else there won't be any left!

Whitehurst appointed director of NSTL's Earth Resources Laboratory

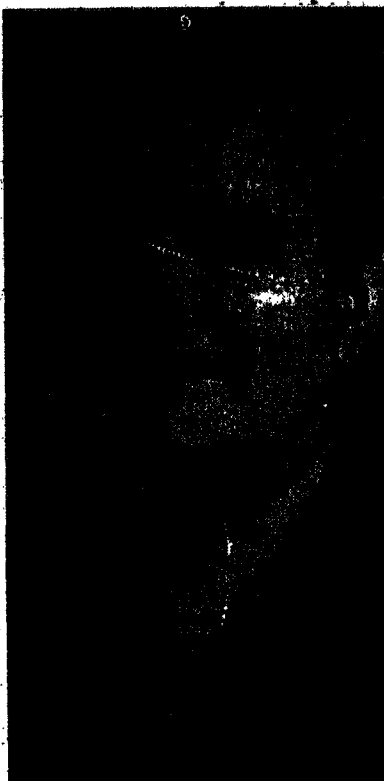

Dr. Charles Whitehurst has been appointed director of the National Space Technology Laboratories' Earth Resources Laboratory, according to Jerry Hlass, NSTL director.

In his new position, Whitehurst is responsible for developing and managing a comprehensive research and development program in remote sensing technology. His duties will support NASA goals in space science and applications, space station development and commercialization of space.

During the last year he served as a consultant in the Office of Ground Water Protection at the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in Washington, D.C. His most recent assignment with EPA was as director of the Hazardous Waste Ground Water Task Force.

From 1963 to 1984, Whitehurst was a faculty member in the College of Engineering at Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge where he served as associate dean for Research and Graduate Activities. Also during that time he was instrumental in the development of an interdisciplinary remote sensing and image processing laboratory at the university. From 1976 to 1980 he was the science and technology advisor to the Governor of Louisiana. Whitehurst received a bachelor of science degree from LSU, a master of science from Southern Methodist University and a doctorate from Texas A&M, all in mechanical engineering.

A native of Mansfield, La., Whitehurst and his wife, Jean, now reside in Slidell, La. They are the parents of three children.

Whitehurst replaces Wayne Mooneyhan, who retired from NASA after serving the past 11 years as laboratory director. Mooneyhan is now director of the Global Resources Information Data Base for the United Nations Environmental Programs in Geneva, Switzerland.

OMB rewrites armed services testimony on new GI Bill

The author of the new GI Bill pulled no punches today expressing to a Congressional panel his disdain for Office of Management and Budget interference in an oversight hearing on the progress of the new education assistance program implemented earlier this year.

"It came as a complete shock...this is a very serious situation," said Congressman G. V. (Sonny) Montgomery (D-MS). He remarked after the hearing that "to clear legislative proposals is one thing, but to change oversight testimony goes far beyond what OMB is supposed to do."

The Veterans' Affairs Subcommittee on Education, Training and Employment had received from each branch of the Armed Services testimony approved by the Office of the Secretary of Defense, but was notified Monday afternoon that a statement prepared by the Army was being recalled and rewritten.

Under OMB direction, the Navy had pulled its testimony on Friday and presented a revised version on Monday. No reason was given. Testimony prepared by the Air Force and Marines was not called back. According to Montgomery, OMB "seems to want to prohibit those who know the program best from letting us know how well it's working."

Testimony presented by the Army was substantially revised to exclude favorable statistical information, including the following: "The new GI Bill and Army College Fund is a more powerful tool for attracting quality than the Veteran's Educational Assistance Program (VEAP) and Army College Fund. We enlisted 17 percent, from 13,700 to 16,000, more high quality males in the first quarter of the new GI Bill than we (enlisted) in FY '84. We also enlisted 1,541 additional young people in the top two test categories...we believe, since a high school degree and six year enlistments are prerequisites, that the GI Bill influenced the 130 percent increase, from 933 to 2,144, in six year quality male enlistments during the fourth quarter of fiscal 1985."

Congressman Thomas A. Daschle (D-SD), who chairs the Subcommittee, called today's hearing to "receive preliminary information regarding the impact" of the new GI Bill on recruiting efforts. Daschle said he could not understand why OMB would "distort" testimony. "To withhold statistical information is inexcusable," said Daschle.

Montgomery, chairman of the Veterans' Affairs Committee and a ranking member of the Armed Services Committee, has battled with OMB before over its routine practice of clearing, editing and even rewriting testimony presented by the Veterans Administration.

"Now they're going too far," said Montgomery. "The purpose of these hearings is to determine how well the new GI Bill is doing and how we might need to refine it. It's a test program and we have a responsibility to monitor it. I can't imagine why OMB would want to obstruct that process."

Montgomery requested and Daschle ordered that original and revised statements be submitted for the record for comparison purposes. Chairman Daschle announced that he is going to call on OMB to appear before the subcommittee to explain its actions.

Don't forget safety during the holidays

By Karen L. Moore
Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service

Safety is important any time but with extra guests in the house and with new toys, the holidays are a good time to think about being extra safe.

Dannie Reed, a farm safety specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service, provided the following suggestions on making the holidays safe.

Remember safety at home: "Check any special lighting wires regularly. Don't leave the house or go to sleep with them left on."

"Keep bulbs away from decorations, paper gift wrap or anything that might burn easily. Candles should not be close to combustibles or left burning unattended."

"Overnight guests should get acquainted with the house. Notice porch drop-offs, balconies, stairs and upstairs windows. Provide basic instructions in case of fire. This is important because there are more people in the house and possibly more sources of fire because of holiday decorations.

Supervise children: "Keep children away from driveways when guests are coming and going."

"If children ride toys in the driveway, make sure they cannot ride or coast out into traffic."

"Supervise children while they play outside."

"Match children's toys to their levels of development."

Ask the following questions when selecting toys and gifts for children:

"Is there a place where the child can use the toy?"

"Is the toy too complicated for the child's level of development?"

"Is the toy safe?"

"What do I, as a parent, know about this toy?"

"A prime time for accidents is during the exhilarating moments right after gifts have been opened. Children and adults want to try out their gifts immediately without reading the instructions," Reed said.

Unemployment rate declines

Mississippi's unemployment rate dropped to 9.4 percent in October, a decrease of four-tenths of a percentage point compared to September's jobless rate of 9.8 percent, according to Mississippi Employment Security Commission Executive Director Cohen Robertson. Last year's October unemployment rate was 9.9 percent.

The 9.4 percent unemployment rate for the state was higher than the 6.8 percent national rate for October. MESC figures showed 107,700 unemployed and 1,034,800 employed out of a civilian labor force of 1,142,500. The initial unemployment insurance claims totalled 20,412 in October.

Forty of the state's 82 counties had unemployment rates of 10.0 percent or higher in October.

The counties having the highest unemployment rates in October were Wilkinson with an unemployment rate of 18.7 percent; Greene, with 16.7 percent; and George with an unemployment rate of 15.6 percent.

Carroll, Rankin and Pontotoc counties had the lowest jobless rates in October.

SSC defeats St. Martin for first district win

In a double overtime game played this past Tuesday at St. Martin's gym, the St. Stanislaus Rockachaws defeated the St. Martin Yellow Jackets by a score of 65-58.

All five SSC starters wound up in double figures, with Louis Schuff leading the Rocks with 16 points. Jim Maxey, Tom Walton, and Jim Martin followed with 12 points each, and YaSin Shabazz had 11 points for St. Stanislaus.

With the score tied 52-52 at the end of regulation play, the first overtime period could not produce a winner as both SSC and St. Martin hit for four points each. SSC scored on a basket by Tom Walton and two clutch free throws by Jim Martin.

In the second overtime, the Rocks exploded for nine points while holding St. Martin to only two points. Jim Martin hit four out of four foul shots while Louis Schuff was three for three. Jim Maxey added a basket, and YaSin Shabazz hit a foul shot to insure the Rockachaw victory.

For St. Martin, Scott Jurich led all scorers with 18 points followed by Tim Weldy with 13 points and Mike Evans with 11 points. St. Martin led the entire game until SSC caught the Yellow Jackets with a little over three minutes remaining in the game.

SSC is now 1-1 in district play and 1-4 overall, while St. Martin dropped to 0-2 in district play.

SSC begins play in the Catholic School Tournament this Thursday with a varsity contest against Mercy Cross at 7:30 p.m. On Friday, SSC plays St. John in the round-robin event.

In Tuesday's Junior Varsity contest, St. Martin edged SSC by a score of 44-35. Leading scorers for the Rocks were Shane Harris with eight points followed by Brad Rutledge and John Gross who had six points apiece.

This Thursday afternoon at 5:00 p.m., the SSC 8th and 9th grade teams play Long Beach at the SSC old gym. Both Long Beach and SSC have unbeaten 8th grade teams, so this should be an exciting contest.

The 9th grade game will immediately follow the 8th grade game.

Is the amateur ideal dead?

(The following article resulted from a grant from the Mississippi Committee for the Humanities to the Mississippi Press Association.)

THE DEATH OF THE AMATEUR IDEAL

Part I
By Michael Harrington
Department of Philosophy and Religion
University of Mississippi

One more nail recently was driven into amateurism's coffin by the NCAA presidents.

Their actions may reduce cheating, but they will do nothing to resurrect amateur athletics.

The real problem in the intercollegiate games is the crisis caused by the irrelevance of the amateur ideal to college athletics.

College athletics have become a major social institution. They are extremely expensive enterprises surviving only by maintaining public interest through winning seasons.

Amateurism's bankruptcy has destroyed the moral authority of the NCAA by making its pronouncements irrelevant. "Winning" is the necessary condition for survival in college athletic programs: it enables coaches and AD's to keep their jobs, athletes to get pro offers, and universities to pay the bills for their expensive entertainment and publicity vehicles.

Yet NCAA rules still reflect the quaint notion that college sports are played by students for the fun of the game. What it then calls "cheating" in a morally outraged manner strikes many observers as the moral equivalent of condemning a starving family for stealing a loaf of bread.

Its penalties are supposed to be just retribution bringing public disgrace, when they are in fact only economic sanctions in no way lowering the public esteem for the offending parties.

Amateurism itself is a foreign import, based on aristocratic values alien to our professed democratic virtues. Its advocates trace its origins to ancient Greece.

Major philosophers such as Plato and Aristotle saw athletics as only one among many ways of developing excellence of character.

It was only an expedient in the real struggle to perfect the soul. Sport for sport's sake was a foolish confusion of a means for an end.

Amateurism's immediate origins were an 18th century English nobility who had the wealth to pursue sports and the power to keep for themselves. For example, Charles II restricted the sport of hunting to the landowners and the large lease holders, making hunting in commoners a crime ("poaching").

Such exclusion continued into the next century with the rise of team sports (e.g., cricket, rowing, track and field). But instead of law, a more subtle means was used to exclude commoners: the tradition of "amateurism."

Born in this amateurism was the notion of sports for sport's sake. Its rationale was that an activity pursued for itself, rather than wages or good, rewarded the soul rather than the body. So sport was a spiritually uplifting activity and as such the right and privilege of the aristocracy; commoners who work for wages have neither the character nor the means to profit by gentlemanly pursuits.

Amateurism was slow to cross the Atlantic. The early United States had neither organized sports nor social classes. Conquering a continent left little time or opportunity for either.

With the closing of the frontier in the late 19th century came an upsurge in social elitism and the formation of the first professional athletic associations, the baseball leagues.

A fledgling American aristocracy found professional baseball a threat to its illusions. These athletes were not eligible for polite society in Newport and in Charleston even if they were white Anglo-Saxon males.

Unlike England—where aristocratic life set the style and ideals of society—the vulgar baseball players were setting American fashion.

In the early part of this century Clark Hatherington, a philosopher of sport, argued against professionalism.

Sport for sport's sake, he said, fills primary human need to strive for excellence. Play for pay does not, since the reward of money is an inferior motivation which makes the athlete little better than the idle spectator.

Youth, he urged, should be given the spiritually ennobling ideal of the amateur, who plays only for the game itself.

Such amateurism became enshrined in intercollegiate sport during the early 20th century. But by mid-century, professional football and then professional basketball began featuring athletic excellence.

As a result intercollegiate sport began to imitate the ways of the professionals. So over a period of time, telling the amateur from the professional becomes all the more difficult, especially as the one learns from the performance of the other.

Although amateurism is dead in fact, its concept lives on in theory in regulatory agencies such as the NCAA. Yet the irrelevance of this concept has thrown intercollegiate athletics into a terrible crisis.

State art commission attends conference

Four Mississippi Arts Commission staff members recently attended the National Assembly of State Arts Agencies (NASAA) conference in Seattle, Washington. NASAA is the national advocate and resource organization for state arts agencies. MAC conference participants included Nancy Gilbert, executive director; Phyllis Campbell, deputy director; Theo Inman, program administrator; and Joan Draper, director of the Arts in Education Program.

Staff members attended sessions on time management, corporate and business cooperation with arts agencies, and the role and function of advocacy groups and their relationship to state arts agencies. "The conference offered an opportunity to share ideas, problems and different ways of approaching those problems," said Campbell.

In a keynote address, Chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) Frank Hodsoll praised NASAA staff members for their work and dedication to the arts and challenged them to continue to meet the needs of the arts, especially in education. Hodsoll also presented a proposal on Arts in Education which outlined major changes in this partnership program between the National Endowment and state arts agencies.

"Our challenge is nothing less than to work together to overcome the situation that, in 1982, resulted in 61 percent of all American adults failing to attend a single live performance of classical music, jazz, theater, musical theater, opera or ballet, or to visit a single art museum or gallery," said Hodsoll. "In the 20th anniversary year of the NEA and in the 16th year of the Arts in Education Program, it is time for us to plan bold steps. We must encourage communities all across our nation truly to care about art; to decide what their children should know about art; and to design strong programs of art in education to achieve their goals."

Hodsoll's proposal would shift the emphasis from artist residencies to sequential arts curriculum in the schools. It sparked considerable controversy from conference participants. Arts in Education program directors expressed skepticism about their ability to influence curriculum planning with state boards of education. Many state arts agencies currently have substantial artist residency programs that have been established over the years. Some participants voiced concern that this new thrust will damage or eliminate the present artists in the schools programs.

In a final meeting before the conference ended, the NASAA membership voted to reject Hodsoll's proposed changes and asked the Endowment to reopen discussion on the matter with the NASAA board. The National Council on the Arts, the advisory board to the NEA, will decide the issue at its February meeting in Washington, D.C.

Legal seminars slated in Tupelo

The University of Mississippi Center for Continuing Legal Education is conducting two one-day seminars on Dec. 13 and 14 at the Tupelo Hilton Inn.

Art teacher displays work

Dee Cichon, art instructor at St. Stanislaus High School is displaying her personal woven tapestries at the Biloxi Library and Cultural Center through Jan. 2.

This presentation takes its theme from the earth colors of the southwest while showing the influence of the Indian cultures.

Mrs. Cichon graduated from St. Mary's Dominican College in New Orleans; and later she did graduate work at Newcomb College in New Orleans and the American Academy in Chicago. During her college years she was most intrigued by her studies in sculptural work.

However, in recent years, her interest has turned to weaving of tapestries, for through this medium she is able to combine her love for themes of nature with her love for a three-dimensional interpretation of a theme.

The textural quality of the yarns give an added dimension to the scenes and abstract thoughts conjured up by colors, textures, proportions and dimensions of the great expanses of natural forms and landscapes.

Mrs. Cichon has taught art for the past 12 years. She is a recent member of the Handweaver's Guild of America, and she is a past member of the Ocean Springs Art Association and the Women's Caucus for Art.

Forestry commission reports few wildfires

"We are now well into the annual wildfire season," says Forestry Commission Fire Protection Chief Tom Hardage, "and so far our low fire occurrence rate has been real encouraging."

Hardage warned, however, that the bulk of Mississippi's destructive brush and forest wildfires normally come after New Years when the vegetation is in a dry, dormant stage and dry, windy cold fronts frequently sweep across the state.

The State Forestry Fire Chief expressed some apprehension about possible additional budget cuts that could play havoc with the Commission's fire detection and suppression network in the coming months of increased fire danger.

"We'll have to rely more than ever this year on good people calling in to report both controlled burning and uncontrolled fires," Hardage said. "Otherwise," he added, "it could be a long, hot, destructive winter fire season!"

Last fire season more than 6,122 wildfires burned over 71,000 acres and did an estimated seven million dollars in damage to forests, fields, fences, farm equipment and various types of buildings, including a number of homes. The 1984-85 fire season was considered to be a light one when measured against the previous year and the five-year average. A total of 6,781 fires blackened 86,948 acres in 1983-84. The five-year average (1981-1985) is 7,595 fires burning 108,748 acres annually.

Red drum research continues at GC lab

Where do red drum spawn? What do they eat? What are their predators? What causes the dramatic difference between the number of red drum eggs spawned and the number of surviving larvae?

Research aimed at answering these questions is being conducted at Gulf Coast Research Laboratory in Ocean Springs by a scientific team headed by Dr. Joanne Shultz, ichthyologist, and Dr. John Steen, planktologist.

Investigators are in the second year of a three-year study which is being funded by the Mississippi-Alabama Sea Grant Consortium, the Laboratory, the state of Mississippi and the National Marine Fisheries Service. Supplemental support has been provided by the southeastern Area Monitoring and Assessment Program, a cooperative state-federal program of the Gulf States Marine Fisheries Commission.

Research on the red drum, a coveted commercial and recreational species in the Gulf of Mexico, is divided into three states for this project—collection of larvae and their zooplankton prey with associated environmental information, examination of the specimens, and analysis of the resultant data.

This year, five cruises were taken on the GCRL research vessel, the 'Tommy Munro,' to collect samples south of the barrier islands. The sampling period, from mid-August through October, coincides with the red drum's spawning season.

Sampling methods employ a sub-surface drizzle which marks the direction of water currents. Samples are collected with various types of nets near the drizzle, enabling the scientific team to stay with virtually the same water mass and the same larvae population over a complete day-night period.

After towing at a particular depth for a specific period to time, nets are hauled on deck and rinsed to concentrate the samples in buckets attached to each net. The samples are brought immediately to the research vessel's wet lab, where they are labeled and preserved.

Hydrographic information is monitored carefully during the sampling process by a special device connected to an onboard microcomputer which measures salinity, temperature and depth. This data is vital to identification of significant patterns important to red drum ecology and survival.

Sampling cruises are just the beginning of a research process which involves extensive sorting and microscopic examination of larvae and zooplankton.

Laboratory analyses determine the distribution and abundance of red drum and their prey. The red drum's preferred foods and how these nutritional sources change with varied prey composition and abundance are revealed through analyses of the stomach contents of tiny red drum larvae which are compared with information about prey collected simultaneously with these larvae.

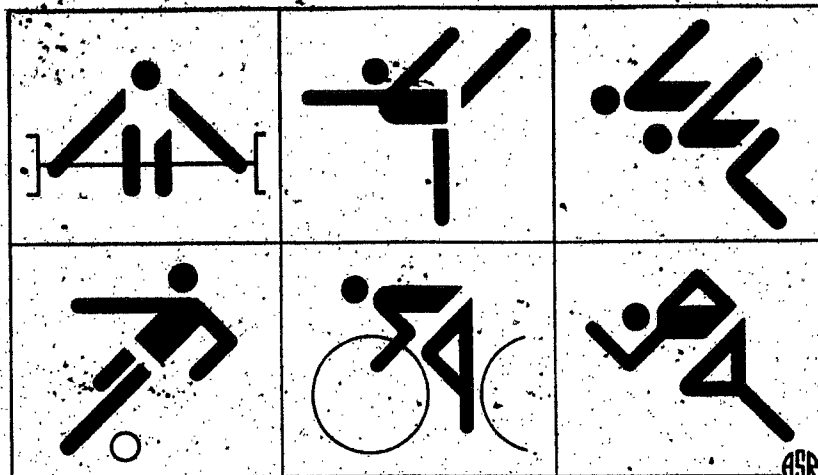

Tiny red drum eggs are examined in selected samples in an attempt to pinpoint red drum spawning grounds. Larval growth rates are determined by removal and examination of minute calcareous stones called otoliths found in the inner ear of all fishes. Otoliths have growth rings that show larval age in days which are similar to annual growth rings on trees.

These various investigative procedures provide accurate estimates about where red drum spawn, what factors affect their condition, and how the young fish survive starvation and predation.

After devoting the first two years of the project to field observations and sample collections, Dr. Steen and Dr. Shultz will be analyzing data during 1986 which should provide valuable information on the early stages of red drum to supplement what is already known about juvenile and adult members of the species.

Eat To Compete:

Nutrition Boosts Sports' Performance

Although Americans are flocking to health clubs in record numbers, and turning marathons into mob scenes, surprisingly few of us know much about the relationship between food and athletic performance. The old myths about proteins and sugars hang on, in a context of fast food and fad diets. If you don't have a sports nutritionist in the kitchen, or a regular meal ticket at a training table, chances are your food regimen is the least efficient part of your personal fitness program.

Doubt it? Try your nutrition knowledge out on these:

- |  | True                     | False                    |
|--|--------------------------|--------------------------|
| 1. Thirst is a reliable indicator of dehydration.  | <input type="checkbox"/> | <input type="checkbox"/> |
| 2. Protein is a major source of energy during exercise.                                  | <input type="checkbox"/> | <input type="checkbox"/> |
| 3. Salt tablets should be taken to replace the sodium lost through perspiration.         | <input type="checkbox"/> | <input type="checkbox"/> |
| 4. Protein should make up no more than about 12 percent of daily caloric intake.         | <input type="checkbox"/> | <input type="checkbox"/> |
| 5. The body needs approximately one cup of fluid for every 15 to 30 minutes of exercise. | <input type="checkbox"/> | <input type="checkbox"/> |

If you answered every question right (see answers below), you probably already know how to fuel-up for maximum performance in the sport of your choice. If not, there's help available.

"Eat to Compete," a series of nine pamphlets, each dealing with a specific sport, has been produced by the NutraSweet Group, a division of G.D. Searle & Co., and endorsed by the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU). Each pamphlet presents a concise summary of general information about nutrition and specific information about nutritional requirements for the sport in question.

Developed under the guidance of Syracuse University sports nutritionist Dr. Sarah H. Short, the colorful brochures tell how to "eat right" for running, swimming, biking, hiking, racquet sports, aerobic dance, weight training, skating and skiing.

The brochures are available, free of charge, by writing: Eat to Compete, c/o AAU, 3400 W. 86th St., Indianapolis, Indiana, 46268. Please enclose a letter-size stamped, self-addressed envelope. Indicate which sport or sports are of interest.

(Answers: 1. False. Thirst is not a good indicator of dehydration. 2. False. Carbohydrates provide the major energy source for exercise. 3. False. Normal seasoning on food provides adequate sodium; too much salt pulls water from muscle cells. 4. True. Carbohydrates should make up 55-60 percent of daily caloric intake; 30-35 percent should be fats. 5. True. Dehydration is a common cause of fatigue.)

Guns as gifts

Parents should be safety conscious

The success of the U.S. Olympic Shooting Team during the 1984 Olympics increased interest among young people in shooting sports. As a result, guns have become a popular Christmas item.

The National Rifle Association strongly encourages parents intending to introduce their youngsters to recreational shooting to follow these safety tips on Christmas Day.

* Contact your local gun club or the National Rifle Association and make arrangements for your youngster to attend a basic gun safety handling course as soon after Christmas day as possible.

* Include a variety of safety brochures and books along with the new gun and, together with your youngster, carefully read through the information.

* Set aside time to discuss safety and responsible gun ownership. Clearly define the conditions under which the gun may be handled and fired.

* Refrain from buying BBs or other ammunition until your youngster has attended a basic firearm safety course.

* After the gun has been unwrapped and whenever you handle it, always:

- 1) Keep the muzzle pointed in a safe direction
- 2) Keep your finger off the trigger
- 3) Keep the action open and unloaded
- 4) Treat every gun as if it is loaded

* Training programs, brochures, books and the parents' personal involvement are all effective ways of educating the junior shooter on the importance of handling his or her newest Christmas present with respect.

* For further information about gun safety programs contact the Education and Training Department, 1600 Rhode Island Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036 or phone (202) 828-6280.

Post-season honors go to PRC grid players

Five Pearl River College football players received post-season honors for their performances during the 1985 Wildcat season.

Former Poplarville High School running back Marvin Houston headed the list as he was named All-Region 23, All-State, and was selected to play in the Mississippi Junior College All-Star game to be held in Tupelo.

Houston rushed for 655 yards for a 4.0 yard-per-carry average and scored 54 points for the season.

ASK OCHSNER

Q. My daughter is 20 years old and is very active in sports and aerobics. I am 47 years old and have been playing tennis for about 5 years on a recreational basis. She tells me that I'm not exerting myself enough during tennis to be physically fit. Isn't fitness relative to your age? Mrs. BA, Lockport, La.

A. The term "fitness" means different things for many people. For some, being fit may mean being able to walk up a flight of stairs without breathing hard. For others, it may mean being able to run a mile in seven minutes.

Mr. Rob Streck, fitness specialist at Ochsner Clinic, says that fitness is truly defined as the ability of a person to operate at a high functional capacity at certain periods in his life. Fitness takes into account not only age, but also your job and recreational activities—and is completely individual.

Throughout the lifespan of a person, Streck says there are basically four levels of fitness:

Level one: Developmental

This level begins at infancy and includes the normal growth and development of a child. Walking, coordination and motor patterns all make up this first level of fitness.

Level two: Sports Related

Beginning in childhood and continuing throughout young adult life, the sports fitness includes play and competition in games. Peer acceptance and self-esteem play a big part in this level of fitness for a child.

Level three: Continuance in Sports/Recreational

Between the ages of 18 and 30, the majority of people will continue with exercises/sports usually on a competitive/recreational level. Tennis, volleyball, jogging and weightlifting/body-building are the popular sports among this age group. Usually the people who continue with these fitness programs excelled in sports or sports-oriented programs in school.

Level four: Health-related

After 35 years and on, the body begins a degenerative process unless it is constantly maintained through exercise. This is primarily due to the sedentary lifestyle and over nutrition to the body, Streck says. Obesity is the number one health problem among people in this age group leading way to other health problems such as heart disease and cancer.

Developing a complete fitness program, which emphasizes diet and exercise, Streck says, is the best way to maintain a high level of fitness as one ages.

This will not only make the body physically work better, but will also improve a person's mental well-being.

Wildcats ease East Central

The Pearl River College Wildcats eased past East Central 99-83 here Monday night to push their division mark to 2-0 and overall ledger to 4-5.

The Wildcats, under head coach Lawrence Smithmier, had five players score in double figures. Sophomore Dwayne Hanberry of Oak Grove led the 'Cats with 24 points with Picayune's Jerry Ellis pumping in 21, Prentiss' John Walker 18, Tennessee's Neal Murray 16, and Florida's Scott Davis 15.

The Wildcats participated in the Thanksgiving Holiday Classic last week in Pensacola.

The Wildcats lost to Pensacola 89-79 and Copiah-Lincoln 71-59. The last night the 'Cats won 72-58 over Martin Junior College from Tennessee.

PRC's Robert Bridges of Petal is third in scoring the latest National Junior College Region 23. He is averaging 19.3 points per game. Bridges is also first in Region 23 in freethrow percentage.

Neal Murray of Murfreesboro, Tenn., is first place in assists, averaging more than 10 per game.

The Wildcats will play again during the Second Annual Pearl River College Booster Classic this Thursday night at 7 p.m. in the Coliseum. The 'Cats will face Bossier City Community College of Louisiana.

Eight Teams from across the nation will participate in the three day tournament. Play begins at 4 p.m. Thursday, with the games scheduled for 5:30 p.m. and immediately following the Wildcats' game at 7:30 p.m.

The Friday night games will be played at 7 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. and the championship contest at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

Consolation games will be played earlier Friday and Saturday.

Lady Wildcats win handily

The Pearl River College Lady Wildcats defeated the East Central Lady Warriors in Poplarville Monday night 81-65.

After a sluggish first half the Lady Wildcats erased a 31-30 deficit to take control in the final five minutes.

Picayune's Carolyn Littles led the way with 19 point, while teammates Terrie Rhodes pumped in 14 and Mary Mikel 12. Every player on the PRC team scored during the game.

The win was the first this season for the Lady Wildcats. The PRC women had recorded a win earlier in the season but a player was ruled ineligible and the game was forfeited to Southwest.

The PRC ladies were to play Meridian at the PRC Coliseum on Tuesday night.

PRC campus site of basketball tourney

One of the biggest and finest junior college basketball tournaments in the South will be played on the Pearl River College campus starting Thursday.

Eight teams, including two undefeated and nationally ranked clubs, will begin play Thursday afternoon at 4 p.m. in the Second Annual Pearl River College Booster Classic.

New Orleans' Delgado, with a perfect 10-0 mark is scheduled to take on Pensacola Junior College from Florida in the first game. Pensacola is 6-3 on the year and is coming on strong.

In the second game at 5:30, Mississippi Gulf Coast from Perkinston will take on Lakeland Junior College out of Ohio. At 7 p.m., the host Pearl River Wildcats will meet Bossier City Community College out of Louisiana.

The first night's action will end with Itawamba Junior College taking on the undefeated John A. Logan from Carterville, Illinois.

"We will have some good teams, good competition," said Lawrence Smithmier, head coach of the Wildcats.

"In fact, there are no better junior college tournaments anywhere in the nation."

Smithmier said there will be close to 100 senior college coaches and scouts from all over the nation at the games.

"Several players who played in the first Booster Classic signed scholarships because of the exposure they received from our tournament last year," Smithmier said.

Friday's games start with competition from the loser's bracket at 4 p.m. and 5:30 p.m. with the semifinals set for Friday night at 7 p.m. and 8:30 p.m.

The championship game is set for Saturday night at 7:30 p.m. Consolation games will be played starting at 3 p.m.

Marsh scientist reports on roadfills, plant durability

Dr. Lionel N. Eleuterius, head of the botany section at Gulf Coast Research Laboratory in Ocean Springs, recently delivered two papers at the second annual conference of the Louisiana Environmental Professionals Association in New Orleans.

"Effects of Roadfills across Tidal Marshes" examined how solid roadfills act as dams which affect tidal flooding and freshwater discharge, resulting in modifications to inland plant and animal life.

"Production of thousands of acres of tidal marshland could be improved by restoring tidal influence through increasing the number and size of culverts in existing roadfills," noted Dr. Eleuterius.

Dr. Eleuterius' second paper, "Transplanting Strategies for Estuaries," suggested that genotypic selection and selective breeding studies of estuarine and marine flowering plants should become part of transplanting research to combat some of the problems confronting estuaries and salt marshes.

"Most plant species in our salt marshes have adapted to a pristine environment, but are now being exposed to a rapidly changing coastal ecosystem," Dr. Eleuterius stated.

His research indicates that plant species well adapted to a pristine environment may be unable to adjust rapidly to marsh environments altered by widespread pollution, changes in drainage basins and freshwater discharge patterns, tidal regime modification, subsidence and rising sea levels.

"Selective breeding for salt tolerance and rapid growth was carried out successfully in past research conducted at Gulf Coast Research Laboratory," Dr. Eleuterius pointed out, suggesting that selective breeding of estuarine plants gives impetus to similar research in other fields of marine science.

Teachers group offers handbook

The Mississippi American Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, is offering materials to help parents and children learn at home.

Brochures entitled "Home Team Learning Activities" - with accompanying television and radio public service advertisements and an easy-to-reproduce poster are now available to help parents of elementary school children become more aware of the myriad learning resources that are present in the home.

The "Home Team" brochure has over 60 tips aimed at helping parents reinforce the lessons children learn in school. Suitable for parents in all circumstances of life, the tips focus on turning everyday home activities into exciting learning opportunities by practicing the "Three R's" - 1) Reading and Research, 2) Reinforce and Reward, 3) Review and Reapply.

"The bulk of the 'Home Team' learning activities concentrates on reading, math, writing and science tips, with each stressing the idea of parents' children learning together as a team," said Maryann Graczyk, MAFT President.

"Another section of the 'Home Team' brochure," said Graczyk,

"advises parents on ways to strengthen ties between the home and school. In addition to attending teacher conferences and trying to attend school board meetings to stay abreast of school policies; it is important for parents to communicate with the people who work regularly with their children."

The brochures are being distributed free of charge through MAFT locals and the state offices. To receive a free brochure, contact an AFT member in your school district or send a stamped, self-addressed envelope (legal size) to MAFT - Home Team, P. O. Box 6427, Biloxi, MS 39532.

DEPRESSION

One of the most common of mental illnesses and one of the most treatable.

When does a temporary depression become a clinical depression? How can you tell when someone you love — or perhaps yourself — needs help? These symptoms are easy to recognize:

- Sleeping too much — or insomnia
- Confusion, inability to make decisions
- Loss of energy, fatigue
- Guilt feelings, lack of self-worth
- Lack of interest in work or play
- Loss of weight or excessive weight gain

DON'T IGNORE A GOOD LIFE!

At Gulf Oaks Hospital and Clinic, an exceptional psychiatric and counseling staff is trained to help others with emotional problems associated with depression. Special programs have been developed to fit individual needs.

SLIPPED DISC

Of all the conditions which involve the spine, the so-called "slipped disc" is probably the most misunderstood. Typically it is the vertebrae rather than the disc which has actually slipped. When this happens, a spinal nerve opening between two adjacent vertebrae can close up, and cause acute pain, numbness, and even loss of function of that part of the body served by the involved nerve.

MSU group affiliated with national society

Mississippi State University's autonomous honorary chemical society, Mu Sigma Chi, has been invited to become the Beta Rho chapter of Phi Lambda Upsilon, the national honorary chemical society. Mu Sigma Chi was founded at MSU in 1981.

Phi Lambda Upsilon was organized to promote high scholarship and original investigation in all branches of pure and applied chemistry.

Membership in the society includes exceptional students of pure and applied chemistry who are selected from the junior and senior and graduate classes in these fields.

Also included among the membership are well-qualified individuals engaged in chemical work who are affiliated with institutions of higher learning in some capacity other than that of a registered student.

The Beta Rho chapter of Phi Lambda Upsilon was installed Nov. 12 and the Mu Sigma Chi organization was retired.

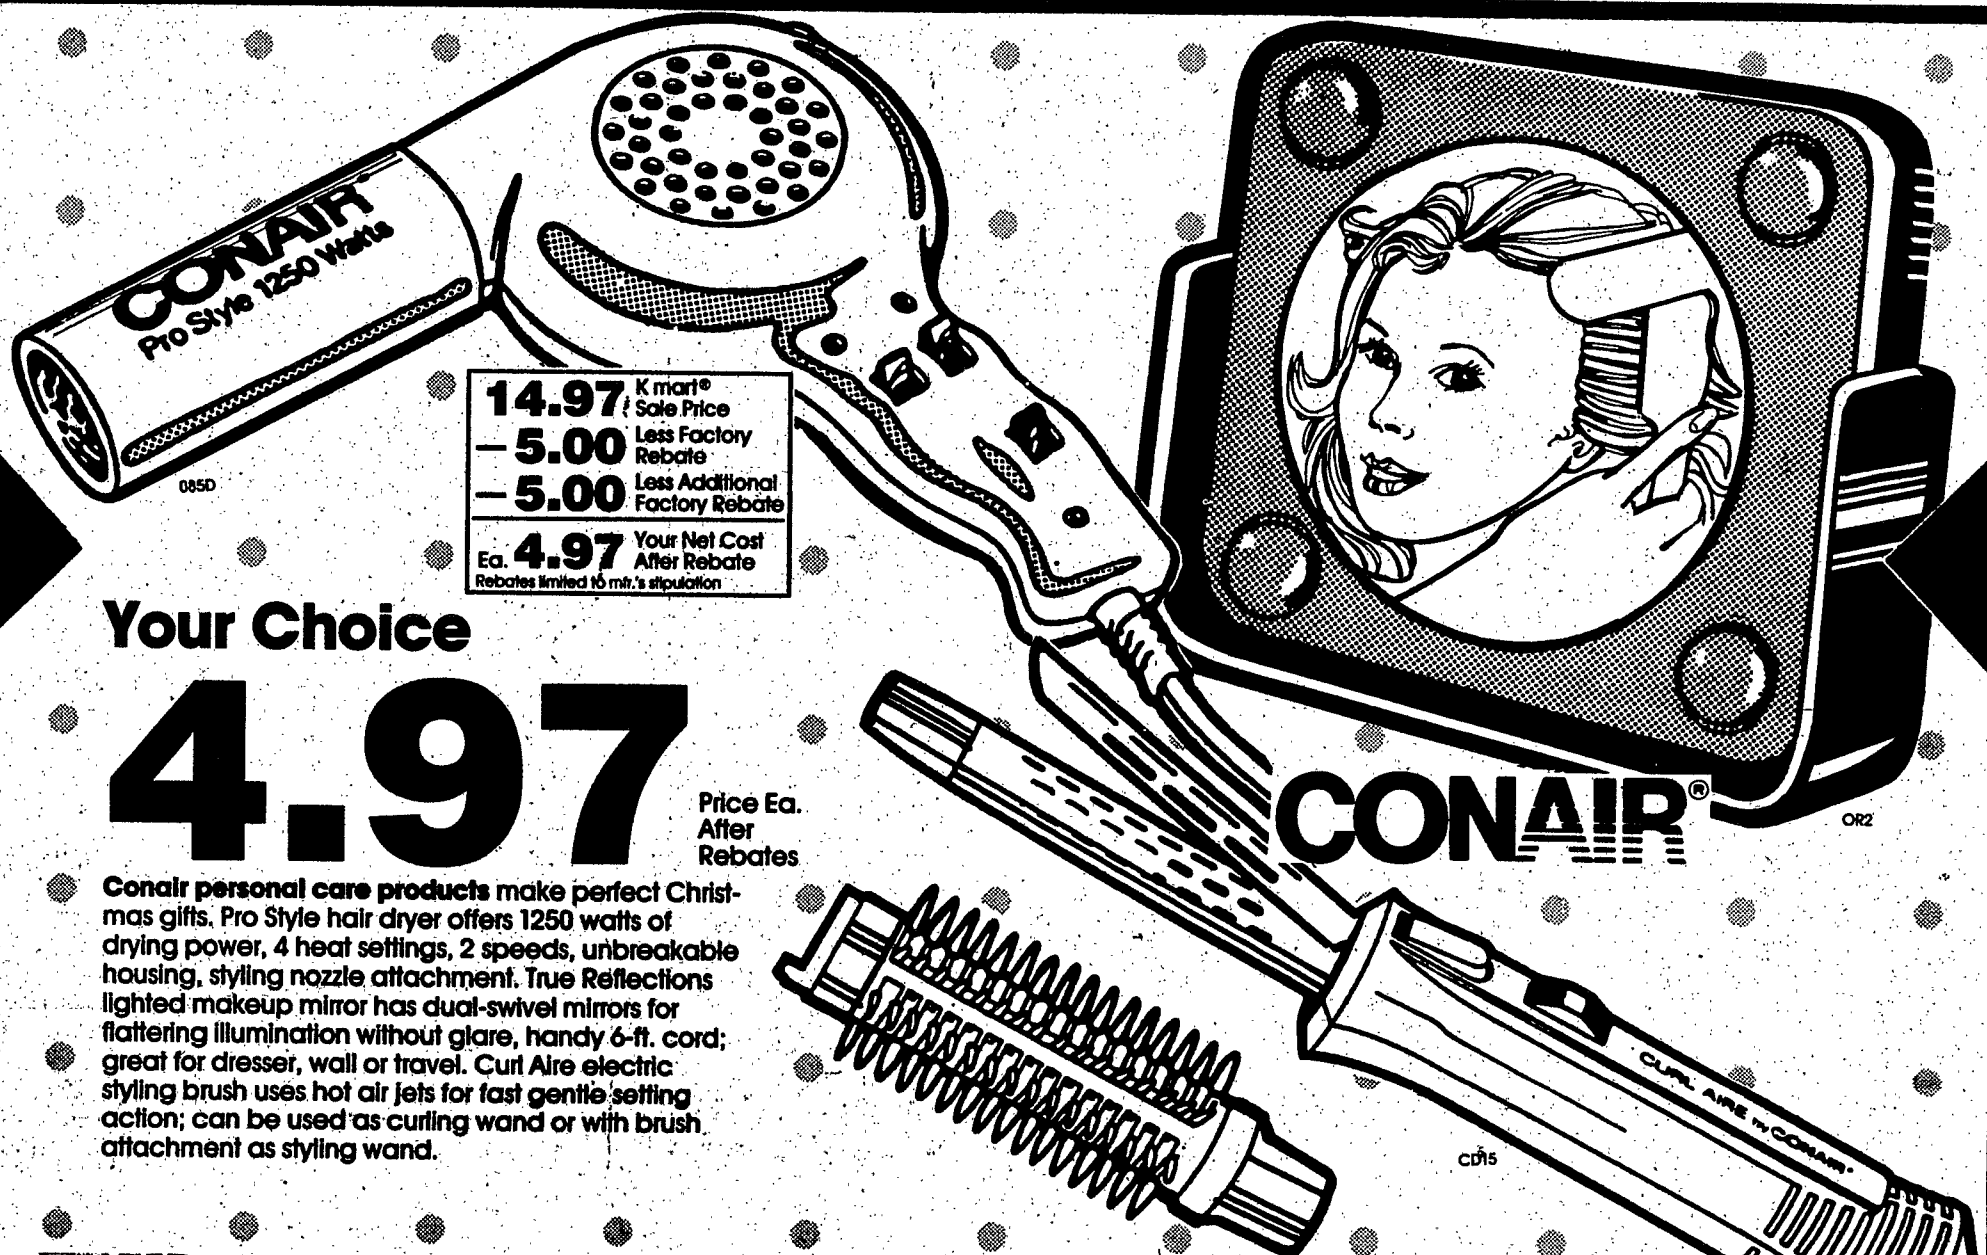

New Phi Lambda Upsilon members include Jill Brinkman, biochemistry major, from Bay St. Louis.

Holidays are good time for financial planning

The end of the year signals the most joyous of all seasons. But for many of us, it is also a time when the family budget is strained to the limit with holiday spending and those once-a-year bills for items like property taxes and insurance.

"This is the best time of the year to set up a plan for managing your family money and for using credit wisely," according to John Gough, vice president of the Mississippi Consumer Finance Association.

Gough, whose organization represents over 510 consumer finance offices across Mississippi, said, "Before you start making those gift lists and applying for credit cards and loans is the time to get your financial house in order. Don't wait until you go out and spend the money and then have to figure out how you'll make ends meet."

To help families with money management, the Mississippi Consumer Finance Association is making available a free "Family Money Management" kit complete with forms for setting financial goals and budgets, as well as some timely information on using credit wisely.

Member finance companies, he said, are committed to helping educate borrower's on complete financial planning, in addition to the proper use of credit and consumer rights related to credit.

The MCFA offers the following points to keep in mind when using credit:

- * Always remember that credit costs money. Renting money is like renting a house or car—you have to pay for its use.

- * Don't buy something just because you can get it on credit. Buy on credit only what you need and remember, you will have to pay the full price of the item in the end.

- * Make sure your credit source is reliable and has a good reputation.

- * Ask the lender questions. Make sure you understand how much the loan really costs you and how you will be expected to repay it.

- * If you find you cannot meet your payment schedule, do not avoid your creditors.

* If you are unsure about how much credit you can safely carry, contact the manager of your local consumer finance office.

"Credit used wisely can be extremely helpful as a budgeting tool and it provides flexibility for a family's financial plan, as well as relieving cash flow problems, but you must remember that credit is a privilege with built-in responsibilities," Gough said.

"As lenders, the members of our association want our customers to use the money we provide to better their lives, not to get trapped in a web of debt which makes it hard to live from paycheck to paycheck," he said.

With loans outstanding totaling more than $450 million in the state, the consumer finance industry served thousands of Mississippians this year.

For a free copy of the "Family Money Management" kit, write to the Mississippi Consumer Finance Association, P.O. Box 1387, Jackson, Mississippi 39215.

How to build a financial cushion

On building a financial cushion...

The average person cannot handle a financial emergency of $1000 today. Sure, everyone needs an emergency reserve, but how do you make it work?

A reserve fund will prevent you from dipping into the dollars you've set aside for daily living expenses or from taking out a loan to cover such emergencies. Start by setting aside a fixed amount regularly—no matter how small—until you've reached the total you need to pay your regular bills for at least two months. If you have trouble building your savings, try these tips:

—Pay yourself first each pay day, no matter what. Ideally, 5 to 10 percent of the monthly take-home pay is a good beginning.

—If available to you, use the payroll deduction or direct deposit of payroll checks to a savings program. The money that doesn't pass through your hands is more likely to be saved.

—Take inventory of your past few months' spending and commit to saving the money you used to spend on lunches out every day. Instead, try eating lunch out only twice a week.

—Set financial goals and figure out where you stand at present in meeting those goals; then move ahead by earmarking a pro-rated amount each pay check until the goal is met.

—Don't succumb anymore to saving by default for it never seems to be there after everything is paid for.

—If you pay a service charge on your checking account, do some shopping to reduce the cost. Or you may be able to keep a minimum deposit in the account so you can save on each month's charges.

Savings will never just happen. You have to make it happen.

On rules for investors... Bernard Baruch suggested the following 10 rules for investment success:

—Don't speculate unless you can work at it full time.

—Beware of tips and "inside" information.

—Learn everything you can about a company's management, competitors, earnings and growth possibilities before investing in it.

—Don't expect to be right every time. When you have made a mistake, cut your losses quickly.

—Don't make more investments than you can keep track of.

—Reappraise your portfolio frequently.

—Keep a good part of your capital

—Know your tax position so you can sell advantageously.

in a cash-equivalent reserve. Never invest all of your funds.

New Orleans Museum featuring Muriel Francis collection

Pablo Picasso, Joan Miro, Henri Matisse, Georges Braque, Claude Monet, Jacques-Louis David, Edgar Degas, Pierre Auguste Renoir. Works by these and other master artists will be on view at the New Orleans Museum of Art from Nov. 10, 1985 through Jan. 12, 1986, in a special exhibition entitled 'Profile of a Connoisseur: The Collection of Muriel Bultman Francis.'

The exhibition, organized by NOMA, features nearly one hundred paintings, sculptures, drawings and prints and spans over two hundred years of European and American art, from the neoclassicism of David and Ingres to such contemporary artists as Lynda Benglis and Pat Trivigno.

The collection is the result of 45 years of discriminating collecting by Muriel Bultman Francis, businesswoman, philanthropist and patroness of music, theatre and the visual arts.

Mrs. Francis is a long-term trustee of the New Orleans Museum of Art and one of its most generous patrons.

The exhibition of her art collection was previewed Saturday at this year's Odyssey Ball, NOMA's annual fund-raiser which benefits the Museum's acquisition fund.

The dictionary defines a connoisseur as, "a person who has expert knowledge and keen discrimination in some field, especially in the fine arts or in matters of taste."

Muriel Bultman Francis is a classic connoisseur, which is evident throughout her collection.

Mrs. Francis, a native of New Orleans, studied at the Sorbonne in Paris after earning her Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Alabama.

She began her art collection in 1947 with two acquisitions of great importance—Claude Monet's

'Chrysanthemums' (1897) and Odilon Redon's 'The Butterflies' (ca. 1910-15).

With the acquisition of these paintings, Mrs. Francis embarked on a collecting career which is still active after 45 years. Just in the past year, she has acquired works by Edouard Vuillard and Lynda Benglis.

The Francis collection includes a number of works by 19th-century French artists, such as the Neoclassicists David and Ingres and the Impressionists Degas, Renoir and Monet.

The group of eight drawings by Ingres, one of the largest groups in private hands, is one of the highlights of the collection.

Five important works by the French Symbolist Odilon Redon are also included, as well as an important group of Surrealist paintings and drawings by Ernst, Matta, Man Ray, Miro and Magritte.

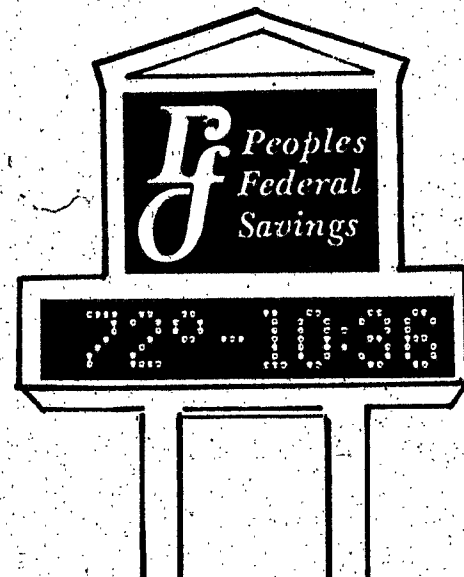

Among the other artists included in the Francis collection are Braque, Cezanne, Delacroix, Giacometti, Gris, Hofmann, Klee, Leger, Manet, Matisse, Modigliani, Picasso and Toulouse-Lautrec.

'Profile of a Connoisseur' not only presents to the public one of the finest art collections yet formed by a New Orleansian but it salutes one of the arts' loyalest supporters and greatest patrons.

The exhibition is accompanied by a fully illustrated catalogue which contains essays by Edward P. Carraco on different aspects of the collection. The catalogue is available in the Museum Shop.

Home resales surge upward

Home resale activity in Mississippi during the third quarter was 42 percent higher than in the same quarter last year, the Mississippi Association of Realtors reports.

"On a seasonally adjusted annual basis, home resales in Mississippi (including existing single-family homes, apartment condominium units and cooperative units) rose to 43,300 units during the third quarter of 1986, compared with 30,500 units during the same three-month period in 1984," said Robert E. Praytor, president of the Mississippi Association of Realtors.

"Home resales in Mississippi achieved the following seasonally adjusted annual rates during the previous four quarters: Third quarter 1984, 30,500 units; fourth quarter 1984, 33,200 units; first quarter 1985, 28,800, and second quarter 1985, 33,500 units," Praytor added.

For all of 1984, 32,000 existing homes were sold in Mississippi down less than one percent from the 1983 total of 32,449. However, the Mississippi Association of Realtors indicates that by year end the total existing home sales for 1986 will be about two percent higher than last year.

Nationwide, resale activity for single-family homes, apartment condominiums and cooperatives during 1986's third quarter rose 24.9 percent from the same period in 1984 to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.76 million units.

"Generally, families are finding that now is an excellent time to buy a home in Mississippi," Praytor said. "Incomes are rising at faster rates than overall inflation, home prices are rising only modestly and interest rates are at their lowest levels in six years," the association president added.

The Mississippi Association of Realtors noted that mortgage interest rates averaged nearly 1.5 percentage points lower during this year's third quarter than in last year's third quarter. According to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the average effective interest rate on loans closed for previously occupied homes was 11.35 percent in the third quarter, compared with 12.73 percent in the third quarter last year.

"The annual rate of a particular quarter represents what the total number of actual sales for a year would be if the relative sales pace in that quarter were maintained for four consecutive quarters.

Seasonally adjusted annual rates are used in reporting monthly and quarterly data to factor out seasonal variations in resale activity. For example, home sales volume normally is higher in the summer and relatively light in the winter months, primarily because of differences in the weather.

Your Pet's Health

By Dr. Steven M. Fox
Assistant Professor of Veterinary Medicine
Mississippi State University

This time of year many of us begin to question the severity of that all too rapidly approaching winter and in preparation for the worst, begin to winterize our automobiles.

Perhaps you were not aware that the do-it-yourself winterizer can potentially endanger your dog, cat, or livestock.

Ethylene glycol, the major ingredient of common antifreeze coolant for automobile engines, is tremendously toxic to animals.

To further complicate this source of poisoning, animals appear to like the taste of antifreeze and will seek it out.

Cats are quite susceptible to ethylene glycol poisoning with approximately one-third ounce of the fluid causing clinical signs and death. Dogs may be poisoned by approximately twice this amount.

One to six hours following ingestion of ethylene glycol, the affected animal may vomit and show signs of incoordination, rapid heart beat, and panting. The animal may not be hungry.

One of the greatest problems with this type of poisoning is that the animal may return to normal within 12 hours.

However, there is recurrence of more serious signs usually around 24 hours after ingestion. These signs include vomiting, decreasing appetite, dehydration, weakness, incoordination, convulsions, coma, and death.

Animals that survive longer than 24 to 36 hours will develop irreversible

Antifreeze:

Toxic to your pet

ble kidney dysfunction. Additionally, ethylene glycol poisoning affects the animal's intestinal mucosa (lining) and will cause hyperemia and edema of the lungs.

Initially the glycol may enter the cerebral spinal fluid and act directly on the central nervous system to produce a narcotic or euphoric effect. Later, clinical signs are probably due to the binding of the body's calcium, the accumulation of toxic byproducts involved in ethylene glycol metabolism, and inhibition of dietary carbohydrate metabolism.

The quickest confirmation of ethylene glycol poisoning is by microscopic identification of oxalate crystals in the urine.

Once clinical signs show afflicted renal function, treatment is of no avail. If discovered early enough, therapy consists of ridding the gastrointestinal tract of remaining poison, and controlling both convulsions and pulmonary edema by chemotherapy.

It is interesting to note that ethyl alcohol intravenously is the treatment of choice for ethylene glycol poisoning. The ethyl alcohol competes with ethylene glycol for a metabolic enzyme thereby leaving the ethylene glycol unchanged for elimination in the urine with no toxic effects.

If you are a do-it-yourself winterizer, keep antifreeze away from your pets. If you suspect antifreeze poisoning in your pet, see your veterinarian immediately.

Many People Faced With Emotional Problems Feel All Hope Is Lost.

Depression is a disease that brings deep pain and sadness. It disrupts lives. We fear that nothing can be done about it. We fear it will never end.

Depression brings with it changes we feel so deeply, but cannot understand. A feeling of being terribly alone. A loss of interest in things that once gave us pleasure. A feeling that we can no longer cope with life around us—family, job, the world. We may withdraw from friends and loved ones. Or drink to drown our sorrow. Or sleep our days away.

But the greatest sadness of all is living with depression when help is so near.

If you or someone you care about has been living with this pain, you don't have to deal with it alone. A simple phone call to us can be the beginning of a return to life as it should be.

When you call us, you will talk to someone who has listened to many other people with problems like yours. Someone who does what they do because they want to help. Someone with the experience to understand your needs and help you take the right first step toward feeling better.

Depression is an illness that can go on and on if nothing is done. But those who suffer from it can be helped.

If you've been suffering alone, call us. Call for your own sake. Call for the sake of someone you care about. You need not endure this pain when hope is just a phone call away.

REAL VIEWS ON REAL ESTATE

FIRST-TIME BUYERS LIKE CONDOS

Question: The majority of new housing being constructed seems to be condominiums. I would have thought that most people would rather purchase detached housing. Is the condominium market that good? J.J., Jackson

Answer: Dear J.J.

While there are numerous submarkets within the condominium market, if you are single and in the market for a home, you are a good prospect for a condominium.

Recent research indicates that condominiums are becoming an important source of housing for first-time buyers and particularly for those who are single.

In a recent report released by the Chicago Title Company, one-third of first-time buyers purchased condominiums.

In addition, only half of the condo buyers were married compared to three-quarters of the purchasers of detached houses.

While these results can be interpreted a number of different ways, one point to note is how the marketing of condominiums is being geared to first-time buyers.

Obviously, this segment of the market is very aware of the lower downpayment often available when buying condominiums.

Developers usually have financing arranged which allows the purchaser to get into the unit with much less downpayment than that required for a detached home. A lower downpayment means more money available for other expenses incurred during the purchasing of a home.

In a 1983 survey conducted by the Texas Real Estate Research Center, almost two-thirds of the non-detached housing market was purchased by singles.

Although prices of condos often are lower than for detached homes, the research showed many singles are choosing condos even though they could afford more expensive housing.

Reasons cited included the desire for security, freedom from yard upkeep, and the belief that the purchase of a condominium is a sound investment. Perhaps these reasons help explain why you are seeing so much condominium construction.
